

PUBLISHING GUIDELINES

PRESENTATION

Novum Jus is a biannual journal published by the Faculty of Law of the Catholic University of Colombia that presents to the scientific community, academia and society in general, original research results and studies in legal and political sociology. It is aimed at professionals of Law, Political Science, Sociology and related disciplines, students and institutions of national and international order. It is published in January and July of each year.

CALL FOR PAPERS

The Research Department of the Faculty of Law of the Catholic University of Colombia, organizer of the Novum Jus magazine, invites the national and international academic community linked to the development of legal and socio-legal thought to present original and unpublished articles for publication. Articles will be received in English and Spanish. Articles in other languages will be considered for publication at the discretion of the editorial committee.

The journal is open access (Open Journal System) and all articles can be accessed for free.

Dates of paper reception: The manuscripts can be submitted at any time of the year and will be selected according to their relevance.

Form of submission: All the manuscripts must be sent directly by their authors here following the instructions given by Open Journal Systems (OJS). Each submission must contain, in addition, the publication request, the name of the author (s) and the section of the Journal to which they submit their work.

Only unpublished works will be published. The official language of the journal is Spanish, however articles in English and Portuguese will be accepted and will be published in their original languages. The articles must be written on letter-sized pages, leaving a margin of 3 cm. on all edges, with simple line spacing, no space between paragraphs, no indentation on the first line, justified text and Arial or Times New Roman 12 for the text and 10 for the notes. About the research articles:

Scientific nature: Only original and unpublished articles that are the result of study or research of interest in the field of political and legal sociology, which has concluded or whose progress allows the communication of its results, will be accepted.

Structure and presentation of the articles

Title of the article, summary and key words must be in two languages

Title: The title should be no more than 15 words. Times New Roman, 12 point, bold, centered, and all in capital letters.

Author(s): Full name of the author or authors (as they should appear in the publication) in Times New Roman, 12 point, bold, centered.

Institutional affiliation, city and Country: full name of the institution on behalf of which the work is published, city and country location.

Address: Indicate the postal and email addresses of the authors.

Summary: Article summary. It can be descriptive or analytical. In any case, it should not exceed 250 words nor contain less than 100. This text should be written in Times New Roman, 12 font, single spacing.

Keywords: Four or six words that describe the topic and enable cataloging of the article. We suggest using the following thesauri: UNESCO, UNBIS and IEDCYT CSIC),

English title: It must be a literal translation of the Spanish title.

Abstract: It should be a literal translation of the summary into English.

Keywords: It should be a literal translation of the English keywords.

Article body: Body of the article: written in Times New Roman, size 12 points, space and medium and margins of three centimeters on each edge. Articles may not have a total extension of more than 8000 words, including footnotes, bibliography and appendices where appropriate. The body of the document should contain the following sections: introduction, development, conclusions and bibliography. • The sections referring to the issue, the method used in the investigation to solve the problem, the results of the application of said method and the scientific discussion based on the results obtained must be expressly distinguished.

References and quotations cited: Quotations may be included in footnotes with references in a bibliography at the end, according to the Chicago standard.

When drawings, paintings, photographs, graphics, or tables are used, they must be accompanied by a short text or caption to illustrate or explain the main idea of its content, and its relation to the subject of the article. In the event that these visual aids are taken from a website, a book, magazine, or other documents of relevance and legal or socio-legal interest, reference must be made about it by means of bibliographic quotation, in response to the respect due to copyright.

Every work must attach a separate sheet with the summary of the resumé of the author, address and e-mail address, in order to maintain communication with him and to make the corresponding presentation. The written summary should come in the following order: a) name of author, b) professional qualifications, c) graduate degrees, d) books or products or parallel previous article in which production the author has involved, e) name of the research project from which the article emerged, f) name of the group and research to which the project belongs, g) entity or entities that sponsor the project. If the author or authors of the article have some link with the Universidad Católica de Colombia, express mention must be made of it in the abstract, as well as, indicate the institution where he/ she works, academic position and, where applicable, telephone and fax.

Following, the guidelines set by Novum Jus magazine for their publications will be explained. In the following table you will find the correct way to reference the consultation documents (according to the Chicago standard).

Novum Jus Magazine uses the Chicago standard, which is characterized in that all documents are viewed both as a footnote in the References Section at the end of the document. It also uses three models: one for the first time it is mentioned in the document body, another for subsequent times it is mentioned and one for the References Section.

As part of the submission process, authors are required to verify that their article meets all the items below. Submissions that do not comply with these guidelines will not be accepted.

1. Publishing application. I submit the aforementioned manuscript, with the purpose that its publication is evaluated by the Editorial Committee of Novum Jus, as well as by the academic peers that the Journal considers.
2. Responsibility for authorship. I certify that I have contributed directly to the intellectual content of this manuscript, to the genesis and analysis of its data, for which I am in a position to make myself publicly responsible for it and I accept that my name appears in the list of authors.
3. Original and unpublished character of the manuscript. The manuscript submitted is original and unpublished and is presented only to Novum Jus, it has not been published previously nor is it being or will be submitted to the consideration of other periodicals while awaiting the decision of the editors of this Journal. Nor is it subject to publication as part of a book or a larger text.
4. Acceptance of editorial standards. I declare the knowledge and respect of the norms and editorial policies of Novum Jus. Consequently, the manuscript was organized according to the “Instructions for authors”.
5. Conflict of interest: There is no possible conflict of interest in this manuscript. If it existed, I have declared it on the title page as a footnote.

Notice of copyright. Novum Jus maintains a policy of open access to its contents, through Open Journal Systems.

Rights transferred

The author transfers the reproduction rights of his article once its publication is admitted. Consequently, the author authorizes Novum Jus to publish the work, distribute it, sell it, license it and reproduce it throughout the world and all media and formats. Novum Jus is authorized to publish the work by graphic, magnetic, electronic means and by all other known means or by knowing each other, leaving the publication modality used to its decision. The authorization also includes the ability of Novum Jus to perform derivative works in general - such as abbreviations, summaries or translations for publication - as well as distribute it both in Colombia and abroad.

Other rights transferred

The author also grants the following attributions to Novum Jus: a) Make editorial changes to the article that are necessary to adjust it to the publication standards of the Journal, without modifying the substance, as well as those that establish the bases of bibliographic and indexing data in which the University participates or participates in the future. b) Create or modify summaries or extracts of the article, in Spanish or other languages, and edit and publish them in the manner described in the preceding paragraph. c) Determine the type of printing, format, paper type, binding and other physical characteristics of the manuscript, both physical and electronic or digital media that currently exist or are developed in the future. d) Carry out promotional and publicity activities for the manuscript. e) Use the name of the author for purposes of promoting the manuscript.

Guarantee of originality

The author guarantees the originality of the article, and states that any texts or graphic pieces included that may be owned by third parties, are done so with the express authorization to reproduce them in the manuscript. If the manuscript has been prepared jointly with other authors, the author guarantees by sending an express declaration of his co-authors, who has his authorization to sign this agreement on behalf of the co-authors and who authorize the order in which their names appear in the article. The author also guarantees that the article does not contain defamatory or illegal statements, does not infringe the rights of third parties, nor does it contain material or instructions that could cause damage or injury. The author who sends his article to the journal to submit it to the publication process, does so by means of an express declaration of not submitting it simultaneously to the evaluation of another journal under responsibility.

Copyright

The journal guarantees the protection of the moral rights of the author. As a consequence, the author has the right to be identified as such. The author will be entitled to a copy of the magazine and the number of reprints determined by the Editors.

Responsibility of the author

If the author retains full ownership of the manuscript, the liability that may arise from any infringement of the intellectual or industrial property laws related to the content or authorship of the manuscript will be exclusively the responsibility of the author. Consequently, if for any reason or reason, directly or indirectly, the journal Novum Jus, its Director or the Catholic University of Colombia are obliged to pay compensation in virtue of the work of the author, Novum Jus, its Director or the Catholic University of Colombia, will always be able to repeat against the author for the total amount of the compensations and costs, plus the readjustments and interests of the case.

Approximate times for review, acceptance and publication

At Novum Jus Law Journal we strive to maintain a level of transparency and communication throughout the editorial process. We know that the authors wish for their articles to be published as soon as possible. The average time between reception and initial acceptance will be no more than two weeks. The double blind peer review will take an average of two months, in which the journal will keep in constant contact with the authors in order to make the corresponding corrections. If the article is accepted for publication, it will be published in the next issue of the journal, taking into account our publication times and the subject matter of each issue.

PEER REVIEW PROCESS

Preliminary evaluation

Once the articles have been received in the Open Journal System (OJS) platform, the Editorial Committee will carry out an evaluation aimed at verifying the relevance and quality of the article. An originality assessment will also be conducted in order to rule out plagiarism or copyright infringements. If there are no observations on any of these elements, the manuscript will be sent for evaluation by external peers, which will be notified to the author.

During the preliminary phase, the editor of the Journal is entitled to reject an article when it is not relevant within the subject of research of the Journal or when the quality of the text does not correspond to the editorial parameters. In case the article does not meet the formal requirements but, given its quality, the publisher considers that it may be publishable, it may be forwarded to the author to consider the suggestions and incorporate them into a new version of the document. This new version must be uploaded through the OJS platform.

Peer review

In order to guarantee an appropriate evaluation and feedback process, in accordance with international editorial policies, Novum Jus uses the double blind review system. Articles submitted and approved by the editorial committee are then evaluated by expert referees, who in a maximum period of 30 days must review the article and return it to the editor. The Journal's team of arbitrators is made up of recognized national and foreign scholars, with Masters or Doctorate degrees in their respective field of study. The list of referees is published once a year.

After approving the preliminary evaluation process, each article is assigned a number of two academic pairs, national or foreign. The process of peer review is anonymous, therefore at no time during the evaluation will there be knowledge of the name, affiliation and other personal data of the author or of the peer. Each of the components that are evaluated by the peers is detailed in the “peer evaluation format” that can be consulted on this web page.

The reviewing peer cannot issue any concept if he or she identifies the author at any point in the process. If this situation occurs, a new peer reviewer will be assigned to the article. When the peer has completed the evaluation process and submitted the concept to the editor, the author will receive a copy of the suggestions and comments for consideration and be integrated into a new version of the text. The author will have five days to respond if he accepts the observations or not. In case of not accepting them, the Editorial Committee may reject the article. The version with corrections must be uploaded to the platform by the author. In case of being rejected by one of the peers, the editor will have five business days to make an editorial decision regarding the article.
